Sarah Hedlund, Archivist (MLIS, University of Maryland 2017)
Montgomery County Archives
July 1, 2022

The first iteration of what would become the Human Relations Commission (HRC) was established by the County Council in July of 1960, following civil rights protests at several Rockville restaurants and at Glen Echo amusement park. This "Commission on Interracial Problems" was originally formed to communicate with establishments that opposed integration and "keep the public peace." The first meeting, under Chairwoman Ann Brown, took place on July 27, 1960. The Commission's early work included their part in the desegregation of Glen Echo Park, as well as surveys and studies of County establishments and their discrimination policies. On January 16, 1962, the Montgomery County Council passed an anti-discrimination public accommodations ordinance, and charged the Human Relations Commission to investigate potential violations, and conciliate or turn over for prosecution any found violations. Failure to resolve complaints led to public hearings and then to referral to the State or County Attorney.

The records included in this collection document the efforts of the Human Relations Committee to hold Montgomery County accountable for violations of the anti-discrimination ordinance passed in 1962 as well as other anti-discrimination laws and policies, across several public institutions including real estate, business establishments, companies, clubs and organizations, and County services such as the police department. As part of this documentation, the collection includes several files of "Compliance Complaints," involving letters from private citizens informing the Commission of potential discriminatory actions by those institutions described above. When originally processed, these specific materials were marked "Restricted" and therefore made inaccessible to researchers. (See Appendix C below for a list of restricted folder titles within the collection; see Attachment 1 for item-level list of complaints).

Reconsideration of the restricted status of certain material in this collection is now warranted, according to the following criteria:

- 1) No documentation was created at the time of accession to indicate why these records were restricted, or by whom. Provenance information with the transfer paperwork indicates a large amount of the compliance complaints were considered "permanently confidential" (See Appendix A) and returned to the creating agency for this reason. However, no official indication of a reason for the confidentiality and subsequent restriction of retained material was provided, and no indication of which party—originating office or archivists at the time—considered it confidential.
- 2) Though no justification was explicitly documented, several of the original series descriptions cite "privacy concerns" as a reason for the restricted status. One can surmise the proximity of the complaints (dating through the late 1970s) to the time of transfer (1988) may have led to concerns of privacy for living individuals. However, nearly 35 years later (2022), the identification of individuals in these records would seem to have negligible consequences, and the implications of non-compliance regarding businesses, companies, and other public services from the 1960s and 1970s is largely irrelevant, considering most of them are no longer extant. This constitutes an expiration of sensitivity regarding these records.

[There is one exception to this conclusion in the Compliance Complaints from the series “Education/ Community Relations” in which people who were minors at the time are named in the complaints].

- 3) The 21st century political climate has made the history of segregation and the struggle for civil rights imperative to study and understand. Montgomery County has a responsibility to provide access to that history with transparency. Record-keepers of the past have shown a tendency to eliminate, obscure, or downplay discriminatory practices, using restriction or destruction of records to protect those involved. This material is vital to reconstructing the landscape of discrimination in Montgomery County during this time period, and to restrict access implies complicity in that obfuscation.

Therefore, according to the criteria outlined above, it is recommended that files 2, 4, and 5 on the list provided in Appendix C be UNRESTRICTED as of July 1, 2022 and open to researchers on request.

Item 1 will remain restricted because cases involve individuals who were minors at the time the complaints were recorded. Item 3, as a “private hearing” will remain restricted for the time being, with re-evaluation recommended.

Appendix A: Provenance information on the original transfer of this collection (emphasis added):

A large transfer of records from the Human Relations Commission came in 1988 (Accession #88-2): originally 50 cubic feet of material, the records mostly consisted of compliance complaints and were considered permanently confidential. Only 6 unprocessed cubic feet were retained (which still contained much duplication), and the remainder were returned to the originating office as non-archival due to excessive restrictions. Another portion of the collection came in Accession #91-7, containing another 2 cubic feet of public hearing transcriptions. Series X (Printed Material) was culled from various accessions of printed material and added to the collection in January, 1999.

Appendix B: Statement on Access as of June 30, 2022 (now revised):

This collection is open for research. Several folders of material in multiple series are restricted due to privacy concerns regarding named individuals. Redaction services may be requested for these files on a case by case basis depending on the nature of research. Contact the archivist with questions about the restricted files in this collection.

ADMINISTRATIVE HISTORY

The first iteration of what would become the Human Relations Commission (HRC) was established by the County Council in July of 1960, following civil rights protests at several Rockville restaurants and at Glen Echo amusement park. This “Commission on Interracial Problems” was originally formed to communicate with establishments that opposed integration and “keep the public peace.” The first meeting, under Chairwoman Ann Brown, took place on July 27, 1960. The Commission’s early work included their part in the desegregation of Glen Echo Park, as well as surveys and studies of County establishments and their discrimination policies. On January 16, 1962, the Council passed an anti-discrimination public accommodations ordinance, and charged the Human Relations Commission to investigate potential violations, and conciliate or turn over for prosecution any found violations. Failure to resolve complaints led to public hearings and then to referral to the State or County Attorney.

By the 1970s, the Human Relations Commission had expanded to fifteen members and become the agency responsible for enforcing observance of the County's equal opportunity laws. Charged with determining which acts were discriminatory, the Human Relations Commission expanded its scope to include not only racial discrimination but also discrimination on the basis of gender, marital status, handicap, sexual orientation, age (for employment and real estate only), or the presence of children (in housing).

The Commission's workload was organized around six committees: Community Relations, Budget, Employment, Housing, Public Accommodations, and Justice. These sections discussed and identified issues; conducted studies; worked with other County agencies, individuals, and organizations; and recommended action to the full Commission and legislation to the County Council. The Employment, Housing, and Public Accommodations panels received staff investigative reports and recommendations and determined the final disposition of discrimination cases at the administrative level. If conciliation failed, the appropriate panel sat as a fact-finding body in a public hearing, decided whether the discrimination charge was valid, and, where appropriate, determined the proper redress.

Besides enforcing anti-discrimination laws in housing, commercial real estate, employment and public accommodations, the Commission now provides training and technical assistance in civil rights laws. It continues to address community conflict motivated by prejudice and intolerance and to promote increased understanding and acceptance for all of the County’s diverse population.

EXTENT

3.4 cubic feet (4 record boxes, 1 Hollinger letter sized box, oversized material)

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

These records document the efforts of the Human Relations Commission to hold Montgomery County accountable for violations of the anti-discrimination ordinance passed in 1962 as well as other anti-discrimination laws and policies, across several public institutions including real estate, business establishments, companies, clubs and organizations, and County services such as the police department. The records are fragmented, yet provide an interesting window into the racial discrimination that existed in the County during this time, and the efforts of the HRC and others to promote and normalize ideas of equality between races and religious groups. The records include memoranda; correspondence; official and unofficial complaints; testimony, statements and transcripts from public hearings; legal briefs; reports; minutes and agendas; clippings; brochures; notices and press releases; proposals and agreements; petitions; newsletters and other printed material.

The records are arranged in ten series:

- Series I: Administration
- Series II: County Attorney
- Series III: Education/Community Relations
- Series IV: Employment Committee
- Series V: Housing
 - Subseries I: Subject Files
 - Subseries II: Housing Committee
- Series VI: Justice Committee
- Series VII: Public Accommodations
- Series VIII: Annual Reports
- Series IX: Newsletters
- Series X: Printed Material

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

Series I: Administration, 1967-1995 (0.5 cubic feet)

These are the files of the Executive Secretary, and document the functioning of the Commission. They include correspondence, memoranda, reports, fact sheets, lists of members, minutes, appointments, testimony and transcripts, and concern such matters as the Commission's budget, proposed rules of procedure, and the lack of funding and guidance provided by the County Council and the County Executive. The series is arranged in alphabetical order.

Series II: County Attorney, 1967-1976 (1 folder)

This series contains legal opinions as well as memoranda and correspondence. One of the topics covered concerns a proposal to restructure the Commission by separating its activities into panels charged with hearing complaints and investigating and making recommendations for their solution, while the Executive Secretary would conduct preliminary investigations and negotiations.

Series III: Education/Community Relations, 1968-1977
(0.3 cubic feet)

This series contains the records of the Education and Community Relations Committees, which were merged together soon after their establishment. In September 1969 the Board of Education established its own Department of Human Relations to handle complaints and provide programs. After this, the committee acted primarily as an observer and advisor.

The records include reports, correspondence, memoranda, testimony and statements, minutes, agendas, clippings, brochures, and legal briefs, and document specific complaints and cases of perceived discrimination against Hispanics, Blacks and Jews in such areas as tenants' rights, neighborhood centers, vandalism, cross burnings, and literacy programs. They also contain status reports from the first years of the Montgomery County Board of Education's Department of Human Relations, minutes of the Committee on Minority Relations of Montgomery County Public Schools, accounts of incidents and procedures at the schools, and material relating to bussing. The folder titled "Compliance Complaints" is restricted because it contains the names of students who were juveniles at the time of the complaint. This series is arranged in alphabetical order by folder title.

Series IV: Employment Committee, 1968-1977
(0.25 cubic feet)

The Employment Committee was responsible for working to remove inequities in employment practices in the County; conducting studies and investigations of conditions to determine the extent to which discrimination existed in employment in the County; and working with interested citizens, civic groups, organizations, and the business community in carrying out these ends. The Committee also reviewed Affirmative Action programs and provided advice to many county businesses.

The records of the committee contain correspondence, memoranda, brochures, press releases, reports, proposals and agreements relating to such subjects as a proposed Fair Employment Practices Bill, the establishment of an annual Equal Employment Opportunity award by the County, and the Youth Service program. The series also contains charts showing the breakdown of minority employment by county department. This series is arranged alphabetically.

Series V: Housing, 1961-1985
(1.5 cubic feet)

This series contains material relating to discrimination in housing in Montgomery County. It is arranged in two subseries: Subject Files, and Housing Committee. Each subseries is arranged in alphabetical order by folder title.

Subseries I: Subject Files, 1961-1977

(0.25 cubic feet)

These files contain correspondence, statements, reports, agreements, memoranda, bills, newsletters, and a petition and deal with such topics as the practices of developers, real estate and apartment companies, and lending institutions; the Fair Housing Affirmative Action Plan; and a 1971 report on the status of women in Montgomery County. Please see the case list provided in Attachment 1 for folder contents of Compliance Complaints.

Subseries II: Housing Committee, 1968-1985

(1.25 cubic feet)

The Housing Committee was responsible for working to remove inequities in housing; helping to inform the general public, governmental agencies, and the real estate industry of their rights and responsibilities with respect to the intent and purposes of the County open housing law and related federal and state statutes; holding seminars; conducting studies and investigations of conditions which might assist in eliminating prejudice and discrimination in housing; and working with interested citizens, civic groups and organizations, and the business community in carrying out these goals.

The records include testimony, correspondence, findings, memoranda, transcripts, and reports relating to some of these hearings. One folder is restricted because it was conducted as a Private Hearing.

Series VI: Justice Committee, 1967-1976

(0.15 cubic feet)

This committee monitored police/community relations and all other matters that did not come within the purview of other HRC committees, and also made recommendations to the County Council on specific laws. The records contain correspondence, memoranda, reports, statements, and transcripts of hearings. The series is arranged alphabetically. Please see the case list provided in Attachment 1 for folder contents of Compliance Complaints.

Series VII: Public Accommodations, 1957-1975

(0.4 cubic feet)

This series contains correspondence, memoranda, reports, statements, telegrams, and a petition relating to discrimination perpetrated in Montgomery County facilities such as businesses, pools, and country clubs. It also includes the transcript of a 1961 public hearing on a proposed ordinance prohibiting discrimination in public accommodations (which was later passed), the statements of many County citizens related to that ordinance, and the transcript of the 1963 hearing on its proposed repeal (which was defeated). This series is arranged in alphabetical order. Please see the case list provided in Attachment 1 for folder contents of Compliance Complaints

Series VIII: Annual Reports, 1961-1981, 1990
(0.15 cubic feet)

This series contains annual reports for several of the years between 1961 and 1981, and the report for 1990. The cover for the July 1973 to June 1974 report is mislabeled. The folders are arranged in chronological order.

Series IX: Newsletters, 1984-1993
(1 folder)

This series contains three newsletters published by the Coordinating Committee on Hate/Violence of the HRC from 1984 to 1993. Initially entitled Newsletter, the name of the publication was later changed to the Network Newsletter for Neighbors and Teens Assisting Victims of Hate and Violence. The newsletters are arranged in chronological order.

Series X: Printed Material, 1961-1990
(0.33 cubic feet)

This series contains printed material generated by the Human Relations Commission, including annual reports, and information booklets. Also included is a technical report of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, which discusses the development of a framework based on an approach to racial and religious animosity developed in Montgomery County by the Human Relations Commission. This series is arranged chronologically and alphabetically within each year.
